Bible Story

Jesus told a parable about a landowner who made a vineyard. After he got it started, the man rented out his vineyard to some farmers and went away. He wanted the farmers to take care of the vineyard and give him some of the fruit when it was harvesting time. When the time came to get the fruit, the man sent his servants to collect them. Instead of giving the fruit to the servants, the farmers hurt and even killed them. But the landowner stayed patient. He sent more servants, but sadly, the farmers treated these servants the same way. Finally, the man sent his own son, thinking the farmers would respect him. But then the farmers thought that if they got rid of the son, they could make the vineyard theirs. So, they did something terrible—they killed the son! When Jesus told this story, He was explaining how some people refuse to do the will of God. The man who owned the vineyard represents God, and the vineyard is the kingdom of God. The farmers are the people who were supposed to follow God's ways but chose not to. The servants and the son are like the messengers and Jesus, who God sent to show people the right path.
